Tell me about the activities that help you recharge after a busy week.

IL

Cooking and listening to music help me relax. I enjoy sharing food with my family. Quiet time makes me feel refreshed.

IM

After a busy week, I like having a relaxed meal with my family and listening to music. Sometimes I cook something simple. These activities help me slow down, and I do not need a complicated plan to enjoy them.

IH

I recharge through activities that do not feel like another task on my schedule. Cooking a simple meal gives me something practical to focus on, while music helps me settle into a quieter mood. I particularly enjoy combining these with family time because we can talk naturally without rushing.

AL

After a busy week, I usually want a change of pace rather than a packed schedule. Preparing a simple meal and listening to music are two things that help me make that transition. Cooking gives me a small, manageable task with a clear result, while familiar songs make the atmosphere more relaxed. If my family joins me, the time becomes even more enjoyable because we can talk while doing something together. I do not need the weekend to be exciting; I mainly want to finish it feeling rested and connected.

CHECK · a change of pace

음식 이름, 재료, 특징, 자주 만드는 이유를 연결하세요.

What do you like cooking at home? Describe a dish you often make and explain why you choose it.

IL

I like making fried rice. I use rice, eggs, and vegetables. It is simple, and I can adjust the taste for my family.

IM

I often make fried rice on weekends. I use cooked rice, eggs, and whatever vegetables are available. I like it because it does not need many ingredients. I can also adjust the seasoning to suit my family's preferences.

IH

One dish I enjoy making is fried rice because it is flexible and practical. I can use vegetables already in the refrigerator instead of buying everything for a complicated recipe. I prepare the ingredients first and keep the seasoning fairly mild. It is a convenient meal that still feels homemade.

AL

Fried rice is one of my favorite things to prepare at home because it is forgiving and easy to adapt. I usually start with cooked rice, eggs, and a few vegetables from the refrigerator. Depending on what we have, I might add another ingredient, but I try not to make it unnecessarily complicated. The main advantage is that I can adjust both the seasoning and the portion sizes for my family. It is satisfying to turn everyday ingredients into a meal we can enjoy together without spending the whole evening cooking.

CHECK · easy to adapt

Walk me through how you prepare a meal at home, from choosing a dish to cleaning up.

IL

I check the ingredients and choose a dish. Then I wash and cut everything. After cooking, we eat and clean the kitchen.

IM

First, I check what is in the refrigerator and choose a simple dish. I prepare the ingredients before turning on the stove. After cooking, I serve the food and put away leftovers. Finally, I wash the dishes and wipe the counter.

IH

My process begins with checking the available ingredients and deciding what I can realistically make. I wash and cut everything before cooking so I do not have to rush between tasks. While the food cooks, I put away unused ingredients. After the meal, I deal with the dishes and clean the work surface.

AL

When I prepare a meal, I first check the refrigerator and choose a dish that fits the time I have. I make a short list if anything essential is missing, but I usually prefer using what is already available. Before cooking, I wash and cut the ingredients and place them within reach. That preparation makes the actual cooking much calmer. I also put things away as I go, so the kitchen is not a complete mess afterward. Once we have eaten, I store leftovers appropriately and finish cleaning the dishes and counter.

문제를 발견한 순간과 단계적인 해결 과정을 과거 시제로 말하세요.

Tell me about a time when something went wrong while you were cooking. How did you respond?

IL

I added too much seasoning to soup once. I added more water and vegetables. The taste improved, and we still enjoyed dinner.

IM

I once made soup that tasted too salty. I was disappointed, but I did not throw it away immediately. I added some water and more vegetables, then tasted it again. The flavor became milder, and my family enjoyed the meal.

IH

A cooking mistake I remember was adding too much seasoning to a pot of soup. I had followed the recipe too quickly without tasting as I went. When I noticed the problem, I added water and extra vegetables in small amounts. It took some adjustment, but dinner was saved.

AL

I once tried to make a familiar soup a little too quickly and added more seasoning than it needed. When I finally tasted it, I realized that serving it as it was would not work. I felt annoyed with myself, but I decided to adjust it gradually instead of starting over. I added water and more vegetables, tasted it again, and stopped when the flavor became balanced enough. My family still enjoyed dinner. The experience taught me that tasting during the process is much easier than correcting a large mistake at the end.

장르를 단정할 필요 없이 선호 특징, 듣는 상황, 감정 변화를 설명하세요.

What kind of music do you enjoy listening to? Explain when you listen and how it affects your mood.

IL

I enjoy familiar pop songs. I listen while relaxing at home. They help me unwind and sometimes remind me of happy memories.

IM

I usually listen to pop songs with clear melodies. I play them at home when I want to relax. Familiar songs are comforting because they remind me of earlier periods in my life. My choice changes depending on my mood.

IH

I enjoy music with a memorable melody rather than choosing only one genre. After a busy day, I often return to familiar pop songs because I do not need to concentrate on anything new. Some songs remind me of specific people or places. That connection makes listening feel personal.

AL

My taste in music is fairly broad, but I tend to return to songs with melodies I recognize immediately. After a demanding day, familiar music feels comforting because it does not require much effort to enjoy. I often listen while relaxing at home or doing simple tasks. What interests me is how a song can change the mood of an ordinary moment or bring back a memory I had not thought about in years. I choose different playlists depending on whether I want energy, calm, or a little nostalgia.

How do you choose and listen to music in your daily life? Describe the devices or services you use.

IL

I use a music app on my phone. I choose a playlist and keep the volume comfortable. Sometimes I use a small speaker at home.

IM

I usually open a music app on my phone and choose a saved playlist. At home, I sometimes connect it to a small speaker. I prefer a comfortable volume so I can still talk with my family. I save new songs when I like them.

IH

Most of my listening begins with a playlist saved on my phone. If I am at home, I may use a speaker, but I keep the volume low enough for conversation. I occasionally try recommendations and save songs that appeal to me. Having a few reliable playlists makes choosing music quick.

AL

I generally use a music app on my phone because it keeps my favorite songs in one place. Rather than searching for something new every time, I choose a saved playlist that suits what I am doing. At home, I sometimes connect a small speaker and keep the volume at a level where conversation is still comfortable. When a recommended song catches my attention, I add it to a playlist. I like this balance between familiar music and occasional discoveries because it is convenient without becoming completely repetitive.

Tell me about a memorable experience connected with a particular song. What happened, and why do you remember it?

IL

An old song played during a family drive. My wife and I recognized it and sang along. The car suddenly felt cheerful.

IM

During a family drive, an old song came on that my wife and I both knew. We started singing, and our daughter laughed at us. We told her when we used to hear it. A normal journey became a happy memory.

IH

I remember an old pop song coming on during a family drive. My wife and I recognized the introduction immediately and started singing before we even discussed it. Our daughter was amused and asked why we knew all the words. We shared a few memories, and the whole mood of the journey changed.

AL

A memorable moment happened on an ordinary family drive when a song from years ago started playing. My wife and I recognized it almost immediately and began singing along, which made our daughter laugh. She asked how we both knew the lyrics so well, and that led to a conversation about the music we used to enjoy. Nothing dramatic happened, but the journey suddenly felt more lively and connected. I remember it because the song gave us an easy way to share a small piece of our past with her.

계절별 특징을 간단히 비교하고 좋아하는 계절의 이유를 자세히 말하세요.

Describe the seasons where you live. Which season do you prefer, and what do you enjoy about it?

IL

We have four seasons. Summers can be hot, and winters are cold. I prefer autumn because walking outside feels comfortable.

IM

The seasons feel quite different where I live. Summer can be hot and humid, while winter is cold. I prefer autumn because the air often feels comfortable for walking. I also enjoy the changing colors and spending more time outdoors.

IH

Where I live, the contrast between summer and winter is noticeable. Summer can feel humid, while winter requires warm clothing. Autumn is my favorite because it often offers comfortable conditions for being outside. I particularly enjoy a walk when the leaves begin changing, although I still check the forecast.

AL

I live in an area where the seasons bring noticeable changes to daily life. Summer can be hot and humid, and winter often means heavier clothes and shorter outdoor plans. Autumn is the season I enjoy most because being outside usually feels more comfortable. I like seeing the leaves change and taking walks without feeling rushed by the heat. Of course, the weather is not pleasant every day, so I still check the forecast. What I appreciate is the overall balance between fresh air, changing scenery, and manageable temperatures.

Tell me about a time when the weather forced you to change your plans. What did you do instead?

IL

Rain interrupted our planned picnic. We went home and ate together indoors. Then we played a game. The day was still enjoyable.

IM

My family once planned a picnic, but heavy rain began before we left. We decided not to force the outdoor plan. Instead, we spread the food on our table and played a game afterward. We were disappointed at first but still enjoyed ourselves.

IH

A weather-related change I remember involved a weekend picnic. We had prepared food, but the sky darkened and rain started just before departure. Rather than waiting for uncertain conditions, we stayed home and turned lunch into an indoor picnic. The relaxed meal and a game afterward made the day surprisingly pleasant.

AL

One weekend, we had everything ready for a picnic when the weather changed much faster than expected. Heavy rain started just as we were preparing to leave, and the idea of sitting outside clearly no longer made sense. We were disappointed, especially after preparing the food, but we decided to use what we had and create a relaxed lunch at home. After eating, we played a game together. The setting was different, but we still had the time together we had wanted. It taught me to keep plans flexible.

Full Simulation 03

더위와 추위에 대한 옷차림과 활동 조절을 같은 기준으로 비교하세요.

Compare how you prepare for a very hot day and a very cold day. How do your clothing and activities change?

IL

On hot days, I wear light clothes and avoid long outdoor activities. On cold days, I wear layers and choose shorter walks.

IM

For a hot day, I choose light clothes and plan outdoor activities for a more comfortable time. On a cold day, I wear layers and check whether the paths are suitable for walking. In both cases, I adjust the plan to the conditions.

IH

My preparations differ mainly in clothing and the timing of activities. During very hot weather, I wear lighter clothes and avoid planning a long outing in the hottest part of the day. In cold weather, I use layers and consider wind or slippery paths. I prefer adjusting the schedule to forcing the original plan.

AL

On a very hot day, I think about lightweight clothing, shade, and whether the timing of an outing is sensible. I may move a walk to a more comfortable part of the day or choose an indoor activity. On a very cold day, clothing becomes more about layers, and I pay attention to wind and the condition of the paths. The common principle is flexibility. Instead of treating the original schedule as fixed, I adjust the length or setting of the activity so everyone can enjoy it comfortably.

CHECK · adjust the timing

You want to buy a washing machine. Call an appliance store and ask three or four questions about a suitable model, delivery, and installation.

IL

Hello. Which washing machine would suit a family of three? What are its dimensions? Is delivery included? Can you install it and remove the old one?

IM

Hello, I am looking for a washing machine for a family of three. Which model would you recommend? Could you tell me its dimensions and total price? Is installation included? I would also like to know whether you can remove our old machine.

IH

Hello, I would like some information before buying a washing machine. We are a family of three and have limited installation space. Could you tell me which model might fit and provide its exact dimensions? What is the total cost including delivery and installation? Also, do you offer removal of the old machine?

AL

Hello, I am comparing washing machines for a family of three and would like to check a few details before ordering. Our installation space is limited, so which model would you suggest, and what are its exact dimensions? Could you also explain the total price, including delivery and installation? I would like to know whether you can remove the old machine during the same visit. Finally, how soon could delivery be arranged, and do we need to prepare anything in advance? The washing machine delivered to your home is a different model from the one you ordered. Call the store, explain the issue, and suggest two or three solutions.

IL

Hello. You delivered the wrong washing machine. Could you exchange it for the correct one? Could you offer a suitable alternative? Otherwise, I would like a refund.

IM

Hello, the washing machine delivered today is not the model on my order. Could you replace it with the correct model soon? If that is unavailable, could you offer a suitable alternative at no extra cost? Otherwise, please arrange collection and a refund.

IH

Hello, I am calling about a delivery error. The model number on the washing machine does not match my order confirmation. My first preference is an exchange for the correct machine. If that cannot be arranged promptly, could we discuss a suitable alternative without an extra charge? Otherwise, I would like the machine collected and the payment refunded.

AL

Hello, the washing machine delivered today is a different model from the one shown on my order confirmation. I have checked both model numbers, and I can send photos if needed. Ideally, please arrange an exchange for the correct machine as soon as possible. If it is unavailable, I would consider a suitable alternative with the features and dimensions we agreed on, provided there is no additional charge. If neither option works, please arrange collection and a full refund. Could you confirm the next step and expected timing today?

Tell me about a problem you experienced with an appliance purchase or delivery. How did you get it resolved?

IL

A small appliance arrived with a broken part. I took photos and contacted the store. They replaced it, and the new one worked.

IM

I once ordered a small appliance, but a part was damaged when it arrived. I kept the packaging and took photos. After I contacted customer service, they arranged an exchange. The replacement arrived safely and worked properly.

IH

A purchase problem I remember involved a small appliance with a damaged attachment. I noticed it while unpacking, so I kept the packaging and photographed the problem before using anything. Customer service checked the order and arranged an exchange. Having clear information ready made the conversation straightforward.

AL

I once bought a small appliance online and noticed that one of the attachments was damaged as soon as I opened the box. I was disappointed because I had planned to use it that evening, but I kept the packaging and took clear photos before contacting the store. I explained the issue using the order number and asked about the exchange process. They arranged collection and sent a replacement, which worked properly. The experience reminded me to inspect a delivery promptly and keep the relevant information until everything has been checked.

Full Simulation 03

장단점을 같은 기준으로 비교하고 상황별 선택으로 결론을 내리세요.

Compare cooking at home with eating out. What are the advantages of each, and how do you decide?

IL

Cooking at home lets me choose ingredients and portions. Eating out saves preparation and cleaning. I decide based on time, energy, and the occasion.

IM

At home, I can adjust the ingredients, flavor, and amount of food. Eating out is convenient when everyone is tired or we want something special. I consider the total effort as well as the cost before deciding what fits the day.

IH

Cooking at home gives me more control over the meal, but the work includes shopping and cleaning, not just cooking. Eating out can offer variety and a chance for everyone to relax together. I choose according to our energy and schedule rather than assuming one option is always better.

AL

Both options have value, but they solve different needs. Cooking at home lets us control ingredients, portions, and timing, and it can become a shared activity. However, it also requires planning, shopping, and cleaning. Eating out offers convenience and dishes we might not prepare ourselves, though travel and waiting can reduce that convenience. I usually consider the entire experience, including our energy level and the occasion. On an ordinary relaxed evening, home cooking works well; for a celebration or a particularly tiring day, a restaurant may be the better choice.

CHECK · consider the entire experience

Full Simulation 03

눈에 보이지 않는 준비 업무도 포함하고 현실적인 분담 방법을 제시하세요.

What makes household responsibilities difficult for busy families, and how can family members share them more fairly?

IL

Family members have different schedules. Tasks can be forgotten. We can agree on responsibilities and adjust them when someone is especially busy.

IM

Busy families may struggle because everyone has a different schedule and some chores are less visible. I think it helps to list the regular tasks and agree on who handles them. The plan should remain flexible when someone's workload changes.

IH

Sharing household work becomes difficult when people assume that someone else will notice what needs doing. Planning and remembering tasks can also take effort. I think families should discuss regular responsibilities openly and divide them according to time and ability. Reviewing the arrangement occasionally helps prevent one person from carrying too much.

AL

The difficulty is often not just the amount of work but the fact that much of it is easy to overlook. Someone has to notice that supplies are running out, remember appointments, and plan meals before the visible chores even begin. I think a fair arrangement starts with making those responsibilities clear and agreeing on who will handle them. Fairness does not necessarily mean doing identical tasks. It means considering available time, effort, and changing circumstances, then checking regularly whether the arrangement still feels reasonable to everyone.

CHECK · share responsibilities fairly
