Please introduce yourself and tell me about an activity that helps you relax.

IL

I work on weekdays. Reading helps me relax.

IM

I have busy weekdays, so I enjoy reading before bed. It gives me a quiet break from my phone.

IH

My weekdays are usually organized around work and household tasks. In the evening, I read for twenty minutes. I do not set a strict page target because that would make reading feel like another responsibility.

AL

I enjoy a steady routine, but I also need a little time to myself. During the week, I am busy with work and everyday responsibilities. In the evening, I often read a novel or an essay collection. I used to reach for my phone whenever I had a spare minute. Reading gives me a more satisfying break because I can focus on one story instead of moving between different screens. On weekends, I sometimes take a book to a quiet cafe. It is a simple habit, but it helps me slow down and return to the next week feeling refreshed.

Describe your reading habits. Where do you usually read, and why do you like that place?

IL

I read on my sofa. It is quiet and comfortable.

IM

I usually read in my living room after dinner. I use a small lamp and put my phone away so I can focus.

IH

My favorite reading spot is a chair beside the window. During the day, there is plenty of natural light. At night, I use a warm lamp. I prefer short reading sessions because I can concentrate better.

AL

Most of my reading happens in a corner of my living room. There is a comfortable chair beside the window, and I keep a lamp and a glass of water within reach. The place is separate from the desk where I handle work, which helps me relax. Before I start, I leave my phone across the room so every notification does not interrupt me. I normally read for twenty or thirty minutes rather than trying to finish a whole chapter. If the story is especially interesting, I continue. Having the freedom to stop makes the habit easier to maintain.

Tell me about a memorable experience you had while reading a book. What made it memorable?

IL

I read a mystery novel. The ending surprised me.

IM

Last winter, I read a mystery novel that a friend recommended. I guessed the ending incorrectly. We discussed the clues afterward.

IH

One rainy weekend, I started a mystery novel just to pass the time. The story pulled me in. Near the end, a small detail changed my understanding of everything. I went back to check the clues I had missed.

AL

One rainy Saturday, I picked up a mystery novel that a friend had recommended. I expected to read a few pages while waiting for the rain to stop. Instead, I stayed in my chair for most of the afternoon. I was convinced that one character was responsible, but the final chapter revealed a completely different explanation. What impressed me was that the clues had been there from the beginning. I reread several scenes, and they suddenly made sense in a new way. Later, my friend and I compared our guesses over coffee. That conversation made the experience even more memorable.

How have your reading habits changed? Compare your habits in the past and now.

IL

I used to read paper books. Now I also use an electronic reader.

IM

In the past, I only read paper books at home. Now I use an electronic reader while traveling, but I still enjoy paper books.

IH

My reading habits have become more flexible. I used to insist on finishing every book, even when I lost interest. Now I allow myself to stop. I also use electronic books when carrying a paper copy would be inconvenient.

AL

The biggest change is that I no longer treat reading as something I must complete perfectly. Years ago, I would start a book and insist on finishing it even if I had lost interest. As a result, I sometimes avoided reading altogether. These days, I choose books more carefully and allow myself to switch to something else. I also use an electronic reader during trips because it saves space in my bag. At home, though, I still enjoy turning real pages. Having both options has made reading easier to fit into my life, and I enjoy it much more than before.

Describe a cafe you enjoy visiting. What is it like, and what do you usually do there?

IL

I like a cafe near my home. I drink coffee and read.

IM

There is a quiet cafe ten minutes from my home. It has large windows. I usually order a coffee and read for an hour.

IH

My favorite cafe is on a side street near a park. The tables are not crowded together, and the music is soft. I normally visit in the late morning and sit by the window if a seat is available.

AL

There is a cafe I enjoy visiting on a quiet street near my home. From the outside, it looks ordinary, but the inside feels bright and welcoming. The owner leaves enough space between tables, which I appreciate. I usually go on a weekend morning before it gets busy. I order a coffee, find a seat near the window, and read or make notes about the coming week. I do not go there to work for hours. For me, it is a place to enjoy a short break. The calm atmosphere matters much more than having a complicated drinks menu.

Describe a time something unexpected happened at a cafe. How did you handle it?

I left a notebook at a cafe. The staff kept it for me.

IM

Once, I left my notebook at a cafe. I noticed it was missing at home. I called the cafe and picked it up later.

IH

I once left a notebook at my favorite cafe. It contained personal plans, so I was worried. I called and described its blue cover. Fortunately, the staff had put it aside. I collected it that afternoon and thanked them.

AL

A few months ago, I stopped at a cafe with a notebook where I had written ideas and travel plans. I was distracted when I left because my phone rang as I was packing my bag. At home, I realized the notebook was missing. I called the cafe immediately and described its blue cover and the seat I had used. A staff member checked behind the counter and told me someone had handed it in. I felt incredibly relieved. I returned that afternoon and thanked the staff. Since then, I always check the table and chair before leaving a cafe.

Compare the cafes you preferred in the past with those you prefer now. Why have your preferences changed?

IL

I used to like popular cafes. Now I prefer quiet places.

IM

I used to visit cafes I saw online. Now I care more about comfortable seats and quiet music. I also prefer places near home.

IH

In the past, I chose cafes with unusual decorations because I wanted pictures. I realized those places were not always comfortable. Now I look for good seating, reasonable noise levels, and consistent coffee. I prefer places I can reach on foot.

AL

My preferences have changed from looking for something impressive to looking for something comfortable. A few years ago, I would travel quite far to visit a cafe I had seen online. I enjoyed the unusual interiors, but sometimes I spent more time waiting for a seat than relaxing. Now I pay attention to practical details, such as whether the chairs are comfortable and whether the music is too loud. I also appreciate friendly service and a location close to home. I still enjoy a special cafe occasionally, but a reliable neighborhood place is the one I return to most often.

What public transportation do you use? Describe a typical trip and how you prepare for it.

IL

I take the subway. I check the route before leaving.

IM

I use the subway to go downtown. I check the route and travel time on my phone. I carry a transport card.

IH

For trips across the city, I use the subway because the arrival times are predictable. I check where to transfer and leave extra time. If my destination is far from a station, I walk or take a short bus ride.

AL

When I need to travel across the city, the subway is usually my first choice. I find it easier to plan around than road traffic, especially during busy periods. Before leaving home, I check the route, the transfer station, and which exit is closest to my destination. That last detail can save a surprising amount of walking. I also allow extra time in case I miss a train or take the wrong direction. For the final part of the trip, I often walk instead of waiting for another bus. The journey is not always comfortable, but it is practical and affordable.

Tell me about a time a transportation delay affected your plans. What did you do?

IL

My train was delayed. I called my friend and took a bus.

IM

My train was delayed on the way to dinner. I contacted my friend and checked another route. I arrived twenty minutes late.

IH

I once experienced a subway delay before a dinner reservation. When the announcement said the delay would continue, I checked a bus route. I contacted my friend and the restaurant, then changed my route. Fortunately, they held the table.

AL

One evening, I was taking the subway to meet a friend for dinner when the train stopped between stations. At first, I thought it would only take a minute. Then an announcement explained that there was a longer delay ahead. When we reached the next station, I checked an alternative route and found a bus that stopped near the restaurant. I messaged my friend and called the restaurant to explain that we might be late. Fortunately, they agreed to hold the table briefly. I arrived about twenty minutes behind schedule. Communicating early prevented the situation from becoming worse.

How has technology changed public transportation? Explain benefits and one limitation.

IL

Apps show routes and arrivals. They help me, but my battery can run out.

IM

Travel apps make unfamiliar trips easier. They show routes and delays. However, information can be inaccurate, so I still check station signs.

IH

Apps let people compare routes and see arrival estimates. A missed connection is less stressful because another route is easy to find. However, estimates can change. I think people should still understand the general route instead of following a screen without thinking.

AL

Technology has made public transportation easier to use, particularly in unfamiliar areas. A phone app can compare routes, estimate arrival times, and suggest which exit to use. In the past, a missed connection could leave me uncertain about what to do next. Now I can usually find another option within a minute. However, I have learned not to trust the screen completely. Arrival estimates can change, and a weak signal or an empty battery can suddenly remove that support. I see travel apps as helpful guides, but I still check station signs and keep a basic picture of the route in mind.

You are planning a weekend hotel stay with a friend. Call the hotel and ask about a twin room, breakfast, check-in, and cancellation.

IL

Hello. Do you have a twin room? Is breakfast included? When is check-in? Can I cancel?

IM

Hello, I am traveling with a friend next Saturday. Is a twin room available? Is breakfast included? What time is check-in, and what is your cancellation policy?

IH

Hello, I would like a room for two adults next Saturday. Do you have a twin room, and what is the total price? Is breakfast included? Could you also explain check-in times and the deadline for cancelling without a charge?

AL

Hello, I am planning a weekend trip with a friend, and I would like to check a few details before making a reservation. First, do you have a twin room available for next Saturday night, and what is the total price, including additional fees? Second, is breakfast included, or would we pay separately? We may arrive before the afternoon, so could you explain your check-in time and whether luggage storage is available? Finally, what is the deadline for cancelling without a charge? You booked the twin room, but the hotel now offers only a double room. Call, explain the problem, and suggest two or three solutions.

IL

I booked a twin room. Can you change rooms, add a bed, or cancel without a fee?

IM

Hello, I booked separate beds for my friend and me. A double room is unsuitable. Could you find a twin room, add a bed, or allow a free cancellation?

IH

Hello, I reserved a twin room for next Saturday, but your message offers only a double. We need separate beds. Could you check another room category at the same price? Otherwise, could you provide an extra bed or let us cancel without a penalty?

AL

Hello, I am calling about the twin room I reserved for next Saturday. Your message says only a double room is now available. I am traveling with a friend, so two separate beds were an important part of the booking. Could you first check for a twin room in another category at the original price? If that is not possible, would an extra bed fit comfortably without an additional charge? As a final option, could you allow us to cancel without a penalty so we can find suitable accommodation elsewhere? Please let me know which solution you can confirm.

Tell me about a past experience when accommodation did not match your expectations. Explain the problem, your actions, and the outcome.

IL

My hotel room was noisy. I asked the staff, and they moved me.

IM

Once, my hotel room faced a busy road. I asked reception for a quieter room. They moved me, and I slept well.

IH

I once requested a quiet hotel room but received one above a busy street. Closing the window did not help. I explained the situation calmly at reception. They offered a smaller room on the other side, and I accepted it.

AL

During a short trip last year, I discovered that my hotel room faced a busy road. I had requested a quiet room because I needed to leave early the next morning. I first checked whether the window was properly closed, but the traffic was still loud. Rather than getting angry, I went to reception and explained what I had requested and why it mattered. The receptionist offered a room facing an inner courtyard. It was smaller but much quieter, so I accepted it. That experience taught me to state a practical problem clearly and stay open to a reasonable alternative.

상황별 선택 기준을 제시하고 이유와 예시를 붙이세요.

Compare relaxing at home with spending time at a cafe. Which do you prefer in different situations?

IL

Home is comfortable. A cafe gives me a change of scenery. I enjoy both.

IM

I prefer home when I am tired because it is private and free. When I need a change of scenery, I go to a cafe.

IH

Both places help in different ways. Home is private and comfortable after a tiring day. A cafe creates a break from chores and familiar surroundings. If I feel mentally stuck, a short walk to a cafe can be more refreshing.

AL

I do not think one option is always better because they solve different problems. When I am physically tired, relaxing at home is usually best. I can wear comfortable clothes, choose the noise level, and take a break without spending money. However, if I have spent the entire day indoors, staying home may not feel like a real change. Walking to a nearby cafe helps me reset in that situation. I also enjoy the gentle background activity, provided it is not too noisy. My choice depends less on which place is attractive and more on the kind of rest I need.

입장을 먼저 제시하고 특별 요청 확인 사례로 뒷받침하세요.

Do you prefer booking through an app or speaking directly with staff? Give reasons and an example.

IL

Apps are quick. Staff explain special requests. I use both.

IM

I compare prices in apps, but I contact staff for important requests. For example, I would confirm separate beds directly with a hotel.

IH

Apps are useful for comparing prices and keeping records. However, a short conversation helps when a request is unusual. If two friends need separate beds, I would confirm that directly rather than assume a note in an app guarantees it.

AL

I prefer a combination of both methods. Apps are excellent for comparing prices, checking locations, and keeping a written record. They save time when a request is simple. However, they sometimes make an important detail look more certain than it is. A room preference entered in a comment box may only be a request, not a confirmed arrangement. If I were traveling with a friend who needed a separate bed, I would contact the hotel and ask for written confirmation. In my view, the best approach is technology for convenience and direct communication for details that could seriously affect the trip.
